

Jai Mahal Palace

18th Century Palace hotel in the vibrant heart of princely Jaipur state

Jai Mahal Palace- Recall of a Bygone Era

The Palace of Victory

- Jai Mahal Palace- The magnificent royal edifice traces its origin to 1745.
- Former residence of the Prime Minister of princely state of Jaipur
- The majestic palace, a vast complex of regal rooms, pretty pavilions and charming colonnades set amidst 18 acres of landscaped gardens
- The heritage palace has been painstakingly restored and recently refurbished to offer guests the exclusive experience of a royal lifestyle complemented by legendary hospitality.
- The stately Mughal Gardens, resonant with the call of peacocks, is a formal, multi-level, quartered garden with pavilions, water channels, flowerbeds, ponds and stone pathways.

The Natani-ka-Bagh at Jaipur, nucleus of present Jai Mahal Palace was the garden house of an 18th century Rajput chieftain Hargovind Natani. The garden house became a monument to fame 124 years later, when Dr. Thomas Hendley came to live here, and became Jaipur 's most prolific historian and art patron, of the 19th Century.

Jaipur

Jaipur rekindles the romance and mysticism of a bygone era of the Rajputana. Poetry in pink stone transcending time, a city that has remarkably retained its pulse and vitality. A labyrinth of fascinating bazaars, opulent palaces, colourful streets where camels jostle for space with motorbikes. Amber Fort is situated on a forested hill premonitory, above the Maota Lake near Amber village, about 11 kilometres (6.8 mi) from Jaipur city, the Capital of Rajasthan.

Jaipur derives its name from its illustrious ruler Maharaja Jai Singh. The city was undoubtedly one of the best planned in India. The city's architect, Vidyadhar ensured that he first approved all building plans before being cleared for construction; one of the reason's why the old city has developed so harmoniously. The original plan still exists, and it bears a strong resemblance to the grid pattern of modern cities in the west.
