

Photo: Piotr Chrobot/Unsplash.com

Yulia Grigoryeva/Shutterstock.com

Eva Mont/Shutterstock.com

Henrique Pacini/Shutterstock.com

Beirut is the perfect destination for seasoned travellers: here, East and West intertwine in intricate ways, creating a city so magnetic that few are able to resist its powerful draw. Much has changed over the latter half of the twentieth century - Beirut rising to become glitterati central in the 60s but falling from grace during the bloody Civil War - but the city is alive and kicking, enticing travellers with superb gastronomy, the Middle East's most vibrant nightlife and a close proximity to the ancient towns of Byblos and Baalbek.

NOTE: This Guide has been limited to 20 points of interest per section. For the full guide, please visit ArrivalGuides.com

QUIZ
*What Type of Traveller
Are You Based on Your Travel IQ?*

TAKE THE QUIZ

Top 5

The Corniche and Pigeon Rocks

Walk (or bike) along the Corniche to witness the leisurely flow of life by t...

Gemmayzeh & Mar Mikhael Ne...

To discover an edgier, hip side to the city, walk down the

Sursock Museum & Palace

The Sursock Museum of modern art occupies the villa once inhabited by its fo...

American University of Beirut

Founded in the 1860s by an American missionary, the lush, sprawling campus o...

National Museum of Beirut

One of the best archaeological museums in the Middle East, the National Muse...

THE CITY

Anton_Ivanov/Shutterstock.com

The latter half of the 20th century was extremely tumultuous for Beirut, a city which became the battle ground for a bloody Civil War that claimed thousands of lives. The Green Line separating the Muslim West from Christian East is still clearly identifiable by the lush vegetation sprawling across this once no man's land, and sobering war memorials, such as the decrepit Holiday Inn hotel which only saw one year in operation preceding the start of the Civil War, serve testimony to the horrors experienced by locals a mere three decades ago.

Visitors to Beirut will benefit greatly from taking a guided city tour designed to provide a deeper understanding of historic and political context. Today's Beirut is a much safer and more secure place with a distinctive buzz and joie de vivre, but do remain vigilant if you plan to set out exploring on your own, and make sure the city's volatile southern suburbs do not sneak their way onto your itinerary.

DO & SEE

Yulia Grigoryeva/Shutterstock.com

Beirut makes for a fantastic base to explore the rest of the country once the city's captivating neighbourhoods are over and done with. The best way to explore the city is to set out on foot (the public transportation system will likely appear confusing to outsiders) or by bike, hitting major historic landmarks like the old town's Roman Baths, natural wonders like the Pigeon Rocks just off the Corniche, and the upcoming neighbourhoods of Mar Mikhael and Gemmayzeh along the way.

The Corniche and Pigeon Rocks

Walk (or bike) along the Corniche to witness the leisurely flow of life by the Mediterranean; if you head south towards the Raouche neighbourhood, you will eventually come to one of Beirut's most iconic natural sites: the Pigeon Rocks, limestone formations jutting out of the sea. Come at sundown for shisha with a view.

Photo: diak/Shutterstock.com

Gemmayzeh & Mar Mikhael Neighbourhoods

To discover an edgier, hip side to the city, walk down the thoroughfares of Armenia Street (Mar Mikhael) and Gouraud Street (Gemmayzeh), and soak in Beirut's undeniable cool. There are plenty of attractive brunch spots and swank art galleries around (check out the St Nicholas Stairs in the summer for some al fresco art).

Photo: Yulia Grigoryeva/Shutterstock.com

Sursock Museum & Palace

The Sursock Museum of modern art occupies the villa once inhabited by its founder, Nicolas Ibrahim Sursock, who instructed successors to turn the building into an art museum. The will was well-executed: the Sursock Museum is now among Beirut's most attractive, with free entry and guided tours. Its namesake palace is closed to the public, but certainly worth a look.

Photo: Bertil Videt/Wikimedia Commons (image cropped)

Address: Greek Orthodox Archbishopric Street, Ashrafieh, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 202 001

Internet: www.sursock.museum

American University of Beirut

Founded in the 1860s by an American missionary, the lush, sprawling campus of the prestigious American University of Beirut is a pleasure to stroll around. It offers something of a journey into the city's pre-war days. There is an excellent archaeological museum on-site, along with a number of art galleries, and a great many nonchalant feline residents (cats), who famously inhabit the premises.

Photo: Jeremiah Castelo/Shutterstock.com

Address: Bliss, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 350 000

Internet: www.aub.edu.lb

National Museum of Beirut

One of the best archaeological museums in the Middle East, the National Museum of Beirut provides an excellent overview of the region's history. Highlights include the world's largest display of sarcophagi, a line-up of 31 with naturalistic-looking carved faces, a reconstructed Roman tomb, and a collection of bronze Phoenician figurines uncovered at Byblos. The museum is located on the once volatile Green Line.

Photo: Elie plus/Wikimedia Commons (image cropped)

Address: Museum Street, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 426 703

Internet: www.visit-lebanon.org/leisure/touristic-attractions?param1=220

Byblos

The UNESCO World Heritage Site of Byblos is a treasured city, reportedly the first one to be inhabited by Phoenicians, going on to serve host to a sequence of mighty civilisations (from Egyptians to Ottomans) over the following millennia. It's an easy day-trip from Beirut to see early settlements dating back to the B.C., the 12th century Crusader Castle, and the ancient Phoenician port.

Photo: Yulia Grigoryeva/Shutterstock.com

Château Ksara

The historic winery hidden in the Bekaa Valley east of Beirut makes for a fantastic day trip. Tours of the underground caves are held daily, and on-site dining is available at the adjacent restaurant.

Photo: Raki_Man/Wikimedia Commons (image cropped)

Address: Ksara, Lebanon

Phone: +961 8 801 662

Internet: www.chateauksara.com

Temples of Baalbek

The splendid Roman Temple of Baalbek is among Lebanon's most important archaeological monuments, an ancient place of worship with barely any competition among similar structures in the ancient world. Plan your trip around the Baalbeck International Festival for live music and plays held in the town.

Photo: FredChimelli/Shutterstock.com

DINING

Nastya Dubrovina/Shutterstock.com

Eating out in Beirut is a foodie's holy grail: culinary influences mix and mingle in the Levantine cuisine, and so do international restaurants along the city streets. You're equally as free to tuck into a manakish (Levantine "pizza" of sorts) while taking puffs from the ubiquitous shisha as you are to put away a trendy poke bowl. Lebanese cuisine is the definition of comfort food, featuring delicious specialities like kibbeh (made with ground beef or lamb), everyone's favourite hummus, falafel, and kunafeh - for dessert.

Dar Bistro & Books

This longstanding Hamra classic hosts patrons in the inviting inner courtyard, treating them to an authentic homey Levantine experience rather than a meal alone. Stop by for just a coffee and dessert, too - and do not walk past one of the city's best bookshops as you make an exit.

Photo: Farknot Architect/Shutterstock.com

Address: Roma, Wardieh Hamra, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 373 348

Makan & Motto

If Makan's rotating menu of international (most often Asian) specialities and an aesthetically pleasing interior of a historic Levantine villa (with an incredibly atmospheric courtyard) weren't enough, Makan also operates on a rather unusual concept of allowing guests to pay what they please (or "what they think is fair") for the meal. Same goes for Motto, Makan's sister establishment a few blocks down Armenia Street - the primary culinary focus here is on Indian flavours, with different regions featured every week.

Photo: Timothy Christiano/Shutterstock.com

Phone: +961 70 954 057

More Info: Suggested payment for dinner: 35,000 Lebanese pounds

Onno

Once featured on Anthony Bourdain's glorious "No Reservations" culinary TV-show, Onno has stayed up to par with its scrumptious Armenian specialities, as well as some dishes very unfamiliar to the western palate (fried sheep pancreas, anyone?). It's a true feast, so come hungry.

Photo: HelgaBragina/Shutterstock.com

Address: Ibrahim Abdul Aal, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 740 948

Babel Bay

If you're ready to splurge, few places are better than Babel, a fine dining restaurant located right by the marina. The selection of dishes is abundant, with fresh fish and seafood being a particular highlight. Service is, likewise, impeccable.

Photo: Mike Dexter/Shutterstock.com

Address: Zaitunay Bay, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 370 846

Internet: www.babelrestaurant.com

Tawlet

Considered by gourmards and laymen alike to be one of the best restaurants in the city, Tawlet is a Beirut institution, known for the quality of the food and for its hip and elegant style. It only opens for lunch, offering a traditional sample buffet, made with the freshest organic ingredients.

Photo: Rawpixel.com/Shutterstock.com

Address: 12 Rue al-Nahr, Mar Mikhael, Beirut

Opening hours: Mon-Fri 1pm-4pm, Sat 12pm-4pm

Phone: +961 1 448 129

Internet: www.tawlet.com

Email: info@tawlet.com

More Info: Chalhoub Bldg

Seza

This lovely and quirky local Armenian-Lebanese fusion restaurant has a welcoming and homey feeling to it, with great decor and ambience. On the menu are hearty servings of home-made specialities including kibbeh and kofta (meatballs in cherry sauce), among many others.

Photo: Anatoly Tipyashin/Shutterstock.com
Address: Rue Patriarch Arida, Mar Mikhael, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 570 711

Mayrig

Another Armenian restaurant, Mayrig stands out for its impeccable decor and ambience.

Visitors can dine outdoors in the small garden or stay inside and admire the columns and beautiful decoration inside while enjoying the very best of Armenian cuisine.

Photo: Chubykin Arkady/Shutterstock.com
Address: 282 Rue Pasteur, Beirut
Opening hours: Daily 12pm-12am
Phone: +961 1 572 121

CAFES

EYJAN/Shutterstock.com

Beirut's celebrated cafe culture means you'll be spoilt for choice when it comes to having a strong cup of Lebanese coffee or a casual meal. Many local cafes also serve shisha (or hookah), which is commonly enjoyed by locals any time of day or night.

Cafe Em Nazih

Tucked away in plain sight, the Cafe Em Nazih is a budget eatery well-known to the student crowd and artsy types. Its location underneath a hostel ensures there is a continuous stream of internationals, too - all enjoy Em Nazih's offerings and the casual ambience to an equal degree.

Photo: FrauTori/Shutterstock.com
Address: Pasteur, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 562 509
Internet: www.saifigardens.com/en/cafe
More Info: Saifi Urban Gardens

Ahi Poke

Cashing in on the Hawaiian poke bowl craze that's been steadily taking over the globe over the past few years, Ahi Poke serves the coveted dish smack in the heart of Beirut's hip Mar Mikhael. Bowls can be customised based on one's preferred ingredients.

Photo: Magdanatka/Shutterstock.com
Address: Armenia, Mar Mikhael, Beirut
Phone: +961 3 747 135

El Denye Hek

In the heart of Beirut's busiest districts, El Denye Hek is a popular Lebanese eatery, part cavern part intimate garden. Service is prompt and offerings abundant. Come for a traditional Lebanese breakfast or a mighty feast of dinner or lunch.

Photo: pil76/Shutterstock.com
Address: Armenia, Beirut
Phone: +961 71 476 666

Al Falamanki

When in Raouche, settle in for a feast at Al Falamanki, whose casual ambience and waterside location have earned the place repeat customers in abundance. Few experiences beat sharing a water pipe at sundown, and if you get peckish, there always are plenty of manakish varieties to choose from. Further location in Monot Street operates 24/7.

Photo: Chubykin Arkady/Shutterstock.com
Address: Salaheddine El Ayoubi, Raouche, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 808 011
Internet: www.alfalamanki.com

The Lebanese Bakery

Anyone who's laid eyes on a double egg-topped manoushe from The Lebanese Bakery will simply have to have it - resistance is futile. If that variety doesn't tickle your fancy, one of the menu's many surely will.

Photo: Loredana Bitculescu/Shutterstock.com
Address: Salim Bustros, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 337 807
Internet: www.thelebanesebakery.com

Don

The global Asian dining trend arrived in town with Don, a casual eatery serving never-before-seen in Beirut dishes such as donburi, bao buns, Japanese ramen, poke bowls, and more. The menus are brought to your table, but orders are placed at the counter.

Photo: Shebeko/Shutterstock.com
Address: Salim Bustros, Beirut
Phone: +961 76 766 966

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

AlessandroBiascioli/Shutterstock.com

Living up to its somewhat unexpected title of the Middle East's "Party Capital", Beirut never hesitates to throw a great one. Summer is prime party season, when the city's breezy terraces fill up with revellers and poolsides get crowded with sunbeds. Action commonly goes on till dawn, persisting well after the first rays of sunlight. Dress to impress: many upper-scale establishments have a dress code and face control in place.

B 018

The iconic B 018 started out as a house party during the tumultuous 1980s, but having moved to its current location has grown to make lists of the world's hottest nightlife venues. The action goes on underground, but the retractable roof makes for a fantastic setting directly underneath the night sky. Celebrity musicians and DJs make frequent appearances; mind that no food or snacks are served and drinks are only offered by the bottle.

Photo: bbernard/Shutterstock.com

Address: Quarantina, Beirut

Phone: +961 3 800 018

The Sporting Club

The legendary Sporting Club has persevered through some of the most tumultuous years in Lebanese history and come out on the other end unscathed - so much so, in fact, that it almost qualifies as a living museum of the Lebanese 1950s. No longer an exclusive hangout for the jet-setting crowd, The Sporting Club now welcomes all.

Photo: g-stockstudio/Shutterstock.com

Address: Ra's Bayrut, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 742 200

Tickets: Entrance fee applies

More Info: Pool and beach facilities available; there is a seafood restaurant on site.

Saint-George Yacht Club & Marina

Damaged severely during the Civil War, the iconic Saint-George no longer functions as a hotel, but still stands as part of the Marina complex frequented by local elites and expats. Pop-up parties are held by the poolside during the summer; there is a bar and restaurant on site.

Photo: Here/Shutterstock.com

Address: Ain Mreisseh, Beirut

Phone: +961 70 652 655

Internet: www.stgeorges-yachtclub.com/pool.php

Ferdinand

Ferdinand is a feisty bar with class, that serves excellent cocktails and a wide selection of locally produced beers. Fun vibes are Ferdinand's main draw, but the house burgers are certainly a very close second.

Photo: DisobeyArt/Shutterstock.com

Address: Mahatma Gandhi, Hamra, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 355 955

Iris

The stylish rooftop Iris is a place few can find fault with: it can both be a relaxed sea-view terrace and a full-on DJ party spot, with live music weekends and a stable clientele of locals that can at times feel a tad too sizeable. Drinks are mixed by skilled bartenders.

Photo: Jacob Lund/Shutterstock.com

Address: Beirut New Waterfront - Seaside Pavilion Rooftop,

Beirut

Phone: +961 3 090 936

Internet: www.irisbeirut.com

The Grand Factory

A premier concert venue and party location, The Grand Factory is known to electro music fans as Beirut's best night time hangout, one that hosts artists performing in varying genres. One comes here to dance the night away, and no setting could be better than The Grand Factory's rooftop with a view of the mountains and the sea.

Photo: bbernard/Shutterstock.com

Address: Al Rehban, Beirut

Phone: +961 71 694 469

SHOPPING

LEBANESE NOSALGIA/Shutterstock.com

Shopping is a blast in Beirut, although do not expect much in the way of an oriental marketplace: the Beirut Souks are a polished shopping complex with dining and entertainment, and luxury department stores like Aïshti see moneyed shoppers from Beirut and outside come through their doors. Local products worth buying include art and handicrafts produced by Lebanese artisans (fabrics, ceramics, metalwork and more).

Beirut Souks

The polished Beirut Souks are far from an Oriental understanding of a boisterous marketplace. Stores that line these tranquil streets include upscale international names like Louis Vuitton, D&G, Armani, and more - along with more affordable high street brands. The Souks are more than just a shopping complex, with entertainment options, street markets and attractive public spaces.

Photo: Syda Productions/Shutterstock.com

Address: Waygand, Beirut

Phone: +961 1 957 000

Internet: www.beirutsouks.com.lb

Souq al Ahad Sunday Market

Weekends see the Souq al Ahad fill up with vendors selling all manner of goods, from books to knick knacks and original antiques, most sold at prices that are simply unbeatable.

Photo: pixfly/Shutterstock.com

Opening hours: Sat & Sun 7am-7pm

L'Atelier du Miel

Skip the magnets: a nicely packaged jar of Lebanon's very own natural honey makes for a souvenir miles ahead of any trinket. There are a surprising many kinds of honey to choose from, along with other honey-based treats. The Mar Mikhayel location also contains a trendy cafe.

Photo: Alinute Silzeviciute/Shutterstock.com
Address: Tabaris, Next to BLC Bank, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 565 975
Internet: www.atelierdumiel.com

Orient 499

Sophisticated jewellery, interior decor items, cosmetics, pieces of clothing and more are all carefully selected from across the region (nationally and internationally). The brand prides itself on supporting "sustainable luxury", so do expect prices slightly above average.

Photo: Ditty_about_summer/Shutterstock.com
Address: 499 Omar Daouk, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 369 499
Internet: www.orient499.com

L'Artisan du Liban

Started by a non-profit aiming to support local artists nearly four decades ago, L'Artisan du Liban now boasts two locations (a further one in Clemenceau St.) where artwork, woven rugs, embroidery, home decor items and jewellery all made exclusively by Lebanese craftsmen and women are on sale.

Photo: Walid Nohra/Shutterstock.com
Address: Pasteur, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 564 907
Internet: www.lartisanduliban.com

ABC Mall

If one-stop shopping is more your thing, head to the capital's most popular shopping centre, ABC Mall, and browse through local and international brand-name stores with dining and entertainment conveniently at hand.

Photo: blurAZ/Shutterstock.com
Address: Alfred Naccache STR, Mar Mitri 2065, Beirut
Phone: +961 1 212 888
Internet: www.abc.com.lb

TOURIST INFORMATION

diplomedia/Shutterstock.com

Safety

Keep up-to-date with travel safety advice when planning a trip to Beirut and all thorough your stay. While most visits are trouble-free, there is a risk of terrorism present at all times, especially so in crowded areas and around dates of political significance, such as elections.

Governments of many countries advise against travel to some parts of Lebanon (particularly around the borders with Syria and Israel, and around refugee camps) and the southern suburbs of Beirut, where threat of terrorism is especially high.

Photo: Victor Z/Shutterstock.com

Passport / Visa

Citizens of Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and United Arab Emirates do not require a visa to enter Lebanon and stay for up to 6 months in a year for the purpose of tourism, provided they have no Israeli marks or stamps in their passports and a nonrefundable onward ticket; same applies to citizens of Jordan for stays of up to 3 months a year.

Visa on arrival is granted under the above conditions to nationals of the European Union, much of Europe, the USA, Mexico, Canada, China, Australia, and many other countries across Asia and South America. If you do require a visa, an application must be made in advance via a Lebanese embassy or consulate closest to you.

Please visit the General Security web page for up-to-date information.

Photo: TukTuk Design/Shutterstock.com
Internet: www.general-security.gov.lb/en

Best Time to Visit

June through August are some of the hottest months, but these are also the months when Beirut's celebrated party scene is at its most active, revellers gathering by the poolsides, on rooftops and by the Med.

Spring and autumn have milder temperatures and are better fit for slow-paced city exploration and hikes. December through March are the height of ski season, when winter sports enthusiasts flock to the surrounding slopes.

Photo: VectorA/Shutterstock.com

Airport

The Beirut-Rafic Hariri International Airport is Lebanon's primary international air hub, and the main point of entry for the majority of visitors.

There is no official public transportation service connecting the airport to the city, so travellers will need to either pre-arrange a private transfer, get a cab or rental car on arrival, or use a ride sharing app such as Uber or Careem (the latter being the by far cheapest option).

Another option is to try and catch one of the mini buses that transport airport workers to and from the city; no official schedule is available for those, but you may get lucky.

Photo: Juan Garces
Internet: www.beirutairport.gov.lb

Public Transport

Although the Beirut public transportation system is rather extensive

Photo: Pierre-Luc Auclair

Taxi

There are both private and shared taxis available for hire; all fares must be negotiated in advance. With shared taxis, which are cheaper, the driver might pick up a number of passengers along the route, and you can try and join one already en route by naming your destination to the driver.

Ride sharing apps like Uber and Careem are another convenient way of getting around.

Allotaxi
www.allotaxi.com.lb

Lebanon Taxi
+961 1 353 153

White Taxi
+961 1 513 593
www.whitetaxi.me

Photo: ArrivalGuides

Pharmacy

The American University of Beirut contains one of the best medical facilities in the Middle East. Al Madina Pharmacy, corner of Hamra & Nehme Yafet

Photo: Gemma Garner
Opening hours: 24/7
Phone: +961 1 349 349

Post

Don't count on Liban Post for speedy delivery, but use one of the central locations (downtown Riad El Solh or Hamra) if you must. For more time-sensitive parcels or letters, try a private provider like DHL.

Photo: Andy Fuchs
Internet: www.libanpost.com

Telephone

Dialling code +961 1 (zero followed by 7 digits locally)

Photo: Jardson Almeida

Electricity

Two- and three-pin plugs of type A, B, C, D and G are all in use; 220 V/50 Hz.

Photo: Stirling Tschan

Population
~ 1,000,000

Currency
Lebanese pound

Newspapers
Lebanon Daily Star
Al Akhbar

Emergency numbers
Tourist Police:
+961 1 752428
+961 1 752429

Police: 112
Civil Defence: 125
Fire: 175
Red Cross-Lebanon: 140
General Security: 1717

Tourist information

Tourist Information Beirut
550 Central Bank Street, Hamra, Beirut
+961 (0)1 340 940
www.mot.gov.lb