THE CITY

pisaphotography/Shutterstock.com

Floridian Naples is a town beloved by American vacationers and so-called "snowbirds" - residents of the continent's north who head down south come November, when temperatures in many parts of the USA and Canada start rapidly dropping. The fact many choose to spend the winter season in Naples is hardly surprising - with first-class dining, excellent golfing and fishing opportunities, and incredible white sand beaches, Naples is an excellent destination for holidaymakers.

Life in Naples revolves around Fifth Avenue South, a street packed with dining spots and upscale boutiques, and one where sounds of live jazz and reggae music fill the air. Apart from the elegant downtown area, both locals and visitors often favour spending time at the beaches and engaging in all sorts of outdoor activities on land and sea. Lovers of the outdoors will not find themselves at a loss either - the Everglades National Park, Ten Thousand Islands National Wildlife Refuge, and Big Cypress National Preserve are all within easy reach from town.

DO & SEE

mariakraynova/Shutterstock.com

Beyond the beaches, there is much more to enjoy in Naples. The Golisano Children's Museum of Naples is a must-see, as is the Naples Zoo at Caribbean Gardens with its popular giraffes, black bears, and boat rides to view primates living cage-free on islands in the zoo's Lake Victoria. Cool off at Sun-n-Fun Lagoon water park with five water slides, water fountains and a lazy river. For pursuits in nature, take one of the guided tours through the Everglades National Park and/or Big Cypress National Preserve - all with a short drive from town.

Everglades National Park

The subtropical Everglades National Park offers visitors a plethora of fun and engaging activities, ranging from boat trips to guided walking tours through the natural wilderness. On a boat tour, visitors will be able to see wildlife in its natural habitat, with creatures as exotic as crocodiles a stone's throw away.
