Fluffy white clouds roll across skies that always seem to gleam in a spectrum of blue in the Poconos. The majesty continues with a palette of rustic orange in the fall, the pristine white of snowfall in the winter, and the verdant emerald of forests and hillsides in the summer. Reigning for decades as a popular vacation area for citizens of New York and New Jersey, the Pocono Mountains must be seen in person to be believed. Lakes and rivers to explore, land to hunt, and various ski resorts provide an unforgettable outdoors experience.

THE CITY

Nicholas_T (image cropped)

While not your typical "city," the Pocono Mountains of northeastern Pennsylvania were divided into five regions for simplicity. Spanning the Mountain Region, Lake Region, Delaware River Region, Upper Delaware River Region, and Lehigh River Gorge Region, the Mountains have emerged as one of the northeast's most frequented vacation destinations.

Philadelphia Quakers initially began the onslaught of interested vacationers when they constructed the Buck Hill Falls, Pocono Manor, and Skytop resorts in the early 20th century. Since then the Poconos have remained quite popular for their wealth of natural beauty and outdoors recreations.

Visitors thusly enjoy their choice of six natural areas, seven state parks, 17 state game lands, and one national park. Take your pick from watersports, fishing, hunting, and more. White-tailed deer, wild turkeys, ruffed grouse, and other wildlife thrive in the area.

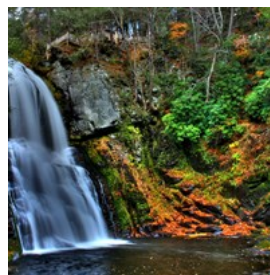

DO & SEE

Pocono Mountain outdoor activities are available year round, making it a favorite vacation spot. Fishing and hunting remain its most popular activities. However, there is something for every nature enthusiast.

Bushkill Falls

Known as "The Niagara of Pennsylvania," Bushkill Falls is comprised of eight waterfalls, the tallest of which is over 100 feet tall. Hike along wondrous trails and bridges to gain access to one of nature's most beautiful creations.
